

NYN FIRST READ

Compiled by Angelique Molina-Mangaroo

Friday, November 04, 2022

TODAY'S BUZZ

Community Access, a New York City-based mental health nonprofit, has reopened its flagship peer workforce development training center in Harlem after two years of in-person closure due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The newly renovated space was unveiled at a ceremony recognizing the generous contributions of Empire BlueCross BlueShield HealthPlus, which supported the expansion of the Howie the Harp Advocacy Center (HTH), an award-winning training and career development program providing comprehensive support for people living with mental health concerns to pursue meaningful careers in the human services sector.

NYN MEDIA

Copyright © 2022 City & State NY LLC, All rights reserved.

You are receiving this email because you have subscribed to First Read Emails from City & State.

Our mailing address is:

City & State NY LLC
61 Broadway Rm 1315
New York, NY 10006-2721